

Student Presentation Awards

Atlantic Estuarine Research Society

At each meeting, the Atlantic Estuarine Research Society (AERS) awards student presenters for the best oral and poster presentations. Typically separate awards are given for oral and poster presentations. Often, awards are also separated by graduate and undergraduate standing.

Judging of student presentations: a note to student presenters at AERS meetings.

The judging of student presentations is a long-standing tradition at AERS meetings. The judging process provides valuable feedback on presentation quality, and may advance professional development. Receipt of an award is an important recognition, and can assist with applications to graduate schools or procuring employment. Should you have any questions regarding student judging feel free to contact Dave Yozzo (dyozzo@hdrinc.com)

Judging of student presentations: a note to judges.

We encourage non-student AERS participants to serve as judges for student presentations. The judging of student oral presentations and posters is a vital service to the Society and to our future professionals in estuarine science and management. Judges should strive to provide students with honest, constructive feedback which serves to identify areas of achievement and improvement. Should you have any comments regarding student judging or wish to participate please contact Dave Yozzo (dyozzo@hdrinc.com)